Grim Search Made In Lake Michigan For Plane Wreck

Nation's 'Worst' Air Tragedy Believed to Have Taken 58 Lives; Pieces of Bodies Found

St. Joseph, Mich., June 26 (AP)—A grim search got underway today in the depths of Lake Michigan where it is virtually certain that the lost Northwest Airlines plane went down.

An airline representative left little doubt that this resort community was the scene of doom for the capacity-loaded ship when he identified a torn piece of blue blanket early today. The blanket was marked with the letters NW.

Other traces of plane wreckage and pieces of human bodies were found on the lake waters last night. An oil slick has been sighted.

There was only the faintest hope that any of the 58 passengers aboard the aircraft could have lived through the worst air disaster in this country's history.

Paul Benscoter, sent here by N.W.A. to help direct the search for the big plane, looked over some grim tokens of the crash—bits of metal, the blanket fragment, a man's fur-collared jacket, other pieces of clothing, part of a suitcase.

But he said a plane log and maintenance report apparently did not belong to the Northwest plane.

Five Coast Guard cutters lined up to go into the wreckage area during the day.

Up to Operations Men

Capt. Nathaniel S. Fulford, representing the commander of Ninth Coast Guard District, said the matter of sending divers down into the lake would be up to the airlines operations men.

Investigators examined a theory that the plane, flying non-stop from New York to Minneapolis, might have been hit by lightning. Reports of residents of the vicinity and the discovery of remnants of human bodies gave some support to this explanation, but it was doubtful whether it could ever be proved.

Part of Skull Found

The coast guardmen found a part of a woman's skull, part of a man's back, and a piece of human stomach flesh.

In addition, they reported picking up blankets marked "N. W." life jackets and parts of life jackets, and a plane log and maintenance report.

The discoveries were made 12 miles northwest of here and six to eight miles off shore. At that point the lake is 110 feet deep.

N.W.A. arranged to fly a group of executives here for the investigation.

The airline also announced it will give accommodations to kin of the victims who want to come here.

Had 55 Passengers

The plane carried 55 passengers and a crew of three.

It was crossing Michigan, a thunderstorm with lightning and winds of gale force was raging. The plane was last heard from at 12:15 a. m. (E.S.T.) Saturday in a "routine" report from Pilot Robert Lind, 35, Hopkins, Minn.

Lind made no mention of a storm.

However, Mrs. Bertha Busse, 60, and Naval Reserve R. P. Hlein, both residents of this area, told of a "flash in the sky" and a "red and white burst."

Mrs. Busse, who lives in Bridgeport, 15 miles south of here, reported seeing "a big plane that seemed to be in trouble" about 10 a. m. She said she heard a blast and then "a flash in the sky."

Hlein, who lives 17 miles north, said a flash of lightning was followed by a "red and white burst," a second blast, and then "smoke."

Caucuses Are Scheduled

There will be Republican caucuses in all the election districts of the city of Kingston Saturday evening, July 1, at 8 p. m., to select three delegates from each district to the county convention to be held at the municipal auditorium on Saturday morning, July 2, at 11 a. m.

President, Top Leaders Hold Parley

Truman Cancels All Calling Lists to Give Korean Situation His Full Attention

To Review Bill

Foreign Assistance Is to Be Considered by Senate

Washington, June 26 (AP)—President Truman today pledged full United States support of United Nations efforts to end the "unprovoked aggression" against South Korea.

In a statement, the President declared:

"Willful disregard of the obligation to keep the peace cannot be tolerated by nations that support the United Nations charter."

He said the United States is pleased with the speed and determination of the U.N. Security Council in ordering a withdrawal of the invading forces.

Then his statement added:

"In accordance with the resolution of the Security Council, the United States will vigorously support the effort of the council to terminate this serious breach of the peace."

"Our concern over the lawless action taken by the forces from North Korea, and our sympathy and support for the people of Korea in this situation, are being demonstrated by the cooperative action of American personnel in Korea, as well as by steps taken to expedite and augment assistance under the mutual defense assistance program."

Must Realize U. S. Stand

"Those responsible for this act of aggression must realize seriously the government of the United States views such threats to the peace of the world."

Mr. Truman's statement was handed to reporters by Presidential Secretary Charles G. Ross.

President Truman summed up the attitude reportedly held by many of his top officials when he told reporters at the start of an emergency flight to Washington from Independence, Mo., yesterday: "It could be a dangerous situation, but I hope not."

Last night the chief executive and 13 of his administration leaders, including Secretary of State Acheson and Secretary of Defense Johnson, conferred for more than three hours at Blair House.

It was understood they reviewed the situation in detail and explored possible further American action to save Southern Korea from conquest by the North Korean Communists. No decisions were announced, however.

The President kept his schedule free of callers today in order to devote his time to consideration of all developments in the crisis in Korea.

No Regular Callers

The White House said there would be no regular calling list such as usually is posted.

This was partially attributed to the fact that Mr. Truman originally planned to remain over in Independence, Mo., last night and fly back to Washington this afternoon.

The President was expected to confer again during the day with Acheson, Johnson and other top officials.

World Shows Fear Of Korean Conflict

Erickson Is Given 2-Year Term and Fine of $30,000

Sentence Is Imposed in Special Sessions Court; 3 Judges Preside

New York, June 26 (AP)—Frank Erickson, kingpin of a nationwide bookmaking business, today was sentenced to two years in prison and a $30,000 fine.

The chubby, 34-year-old gambling mogul, who had pled his multi-million-dollar betting trade for a quarter century without spending a day in jail, was sentenced in Special Sessions court.

He could have received up to 60 years in prison.

Erickson threw himself on the mercy of the court last Monday by pleading guilty to a 60-count gambling charge.

Terms Are Given

A three-judge panel imposed a one-year prison term on one count of conspiracy and a second year on the first 59 counts of bookmaking. The terms are to run consecutively.

The moon-faced, balding mogul, admitted operator of a $12,500,000 a year, coast-to-coast bookmaking empire, also was given a suspended penitentiary term of three years.

The sentence was handed down by Justices Nathan D. Pechman, Frank Oliver and John V. Flood. District Attorney Frank S. Hogan had urged the court to impose a penalty of five years imprisonment, and a $30,000 fine.

Erickson was fined the maximum amount, $500 on each of the 60 counts.

With time off for good behavior, Erickson could get out of jail after serving 20 months. His term will be served in the city penitentiary.

Each of the counts also would have permitted a maximum prison term of one year, or a total of 60.

Sun Rays Are Believed Cause of Fire Today

Sun rays focused through a heavy glass in a pilot house on the salvaging lot of the Wadsworth Maritime Corp., on East Strand, was believed the cause of a fire shortly after 1 p. m. today.

Deputy Fire Chief George Matthews said the blaze started in some old work clothes hanging in the pilot house which had been apparently taken from the ferryboat Montclair.

The call was at 1:08 p. m., and men from Cornell station used one line of hose on the blaze. Damage to the pilot house was slight. The fire was believed to have started in some grease on the clothes.

21 Persons Killed in Flood In West Virginia, 33 Missing

West Union, W. Va., June 26 (AP)—At least 21 persons were dead and 33 missing today in the wake of flash floods that struck a six-county area of north-central West Virginia early Sunday morning. The surging torrents rolled out of the darkness without warning.

Authorities fear the toll may go much higher. At least 12 of the 15 members of a family gathered for a birthday party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Bailey at Smithburg, five miles west of here, are missing.

The Bailey home was directly in the path of the flood. Sheriff Paul B. Davis said the house was carried nearly two miles downstream.

The only known survivor of the family is Charles Bailey, a son, who is in a West Union hospital with a fractured leg, cuts and bruises.

Six members of the B. J. Cooper family at Smithburg also were listed as dead in the swirling waters, and three members of another family there were killed when their home was pounded in bits against a railway trestle.

Berea, a little agricultural community located on a horse shoe curve of the south fork of the Hughes river south of here, also was hard hit. Six persons were known dead there, including a grandmother and two of her grandchildren.

Postmaster Ray Bonnell said the toll at Berea might have been higher except for the Paul Revue actions of two of the town's young men, Harland Hodge and Charles Bridge, who dashed through the community knocking on doors to warn residents.

Property damage is expected to run high. In West Union, 200

Speed Record Is Set

Seattle, June 26 (AP)—The speedboat "Slo-Mo-Shun IV" today roared 160.3235 miles per hour over the measured mile on glass-smooth Lake Washington to crack the world's old hydroplane record of 141.74 miles per hour. Owner-Pilot Stanley S. Sayres piloted the 1,500 craft to the new record in the first attempt. The old record of 141.74 miles per hour was set in 1939 by Sir Malcolm Campbell on Lake Coniston, England.

Woman Injured Rescuing Child

Mrs. Catherine Brutkowski, 65, of 211 Third avenue, suffered a fracture of the right hip early Saturday afternoon in an attempt to rush her year-and-a-half old grandchild, Dona Marie Delavan, 251 Abel street from the path of a mail truck.

The child suffered injuries of the right knee, bruises of the back and leg, scratches of the face and internal injuries, a member of the family said.

Both were reported in "fair condition" today at the Benedictine Hospital where they were taken in a W. N. Conner ambulance.

A police report at 12:20 p. m., said the truck operated by Edward Reinhardt, 383 Abel street, was headed west on Third avenue and turning left into Fourth avenue.

Mrs. Brutkowski saw the child in the path of the truck, ran into the road and grabbed her, but was unable to flash clear of the vehicle, a member of the family said.

Peril Is Seen U.S. Burns Its Papers At Embassy

Seoul, Korea, Tuesday, June 26 (AP)—Invading North Korean Communists stabbed a tank column to the outskirts of this southern republic's capital early today and broadcast a demand for southern surrender.

The surrender demand was made over the Pyongyang radio by Gen. Chai Ung Jun, commander of the northern forces that suddenly invaded South Korea Sunday morning.

Prospects of total defeat of the southern forces through bad morale rather than by being beaten in the field were in evidence at this zero hour today.

Situation Is Grave

Seoul, June 26 (AP)—A Communist northern spearhead swept within nine miles of Seoul tonight and fears were expressed it may reach the city before dawn.

Southern resistance at Uijongbu, only 12 miles away, collapsed before the Russian backed forces hammering at them with tanks and artillery.

The American embassy burned its important secret papers in a huge bonfire. Air raid sirens screamed. The city was buzzing after four northern planes stalled downtown streets.

The flying column rushed toward here from Uijongbu valley. A southern counteroffensive there failed miserably during the day. Heavy artillery softened up the Uijongbu defenders and the tanks pushed them out of town after savage street fighting.

Two southern divisions totaling 20,000 men dug in outside of the town of Uijongbu. But the determined onslaught of heavy tanks pushed them aside and the northern invaders were halted temporarily yesterday, rolled on toward the capital.

Cabinet Is in Session

President Syngman Rhee and his cabinet were in emergency session at midnight. They were reportedly discussing the Ongjin peninsula front, where southern forces were reeling or knocked out.

Advices here said 30,000 southern troops along the boundary between the U.N. sponsored republic and Russian backed north were in dire straits.

Another segment of the southern army was in trouble at Kangnung, 15 miles due south of the 38th parallel on the east coast.

This division was being attacked from both the north and south by the Communist northerners. An urgent call for reinforcements was received in Seoul tonight. An American military official said he was uncertain whether the reinforcement would be forthcoming.

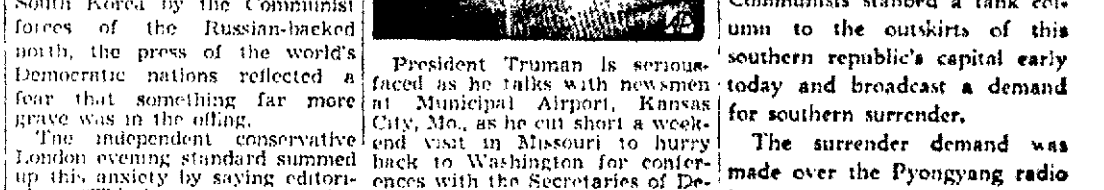

In Seoul itself morale was high despite the straining of several downtown streets by northern planes.

News that 10 American fighters awaited South Korean fliers in Japan boosted spirits all around.

Northern Forces Halted

Northern forces had been halted short of Uijongbu yesterday. Southern forces started a counteroffensive today. The seventh and second divisions of 10,000

G.O.P. Senators In Agreement On Help for Koreans

Washington, June 26 (AP)—Republican senators agreed unanimously today that the Communist attack on South Korea should not be allowed to involve this country in war.

Senator Millican of Colorado, chairman of the conference of all Republican senators, said the G.O.P. members agreed in a caucus that this country should provide military supplies and other aid for South Korea.

"But it was the unanimous opinion that we have no obligation to go to war and that this incident should not be allowed to involve us in war," Millican told reporters.

The Republicans criticized the military establishment and the State Department for what they said was a failure of intelligence services to warn this country that the Russian trained and equipped forces of North Korea were ready to strike.

Negligence Charge Faces Accord Man In Fatal Accident

The Ulster county grand jury will investigate a charge of criminal negligence placed against the driver of an automobile involved in an accident on June 15 which resulted in the death of Vincent Spina, 50, of 134 North Front street.

Russian A-Bomb Claim Viewed as Fantastic Chatter

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE (A. P. Science Editor)

New York, June 26 (AP)—An American atom bomb could blow up only a very little hill, and much less move a mountain as the Russians have claimed they can do.

It would require hundreds or even thousands of A-bombs to move even part of one mountain. Last year Russians said atomic explosives were changing the course of rivers and moving mountains.

The estimate of what an atom bomb can really do is given by Dr. Frederick Reines, a staff member of the Los Alamos, New Mexico, scientific laboratory, where the making of the bombs is directed. He writes in the June issue of the bulletin of the atomic scientists.

"Though the mass of earth which the atomic bomb is capable of moving is large in terms of freight carloads," he says, "it is small compared with a mountain.

"For example, a hill about a quarter mile high and a quarter mile across could probably be blown apart, but one significantly larger would not be so destroyed.

"On this scale, it would take a huge number of bombs, perhaps hundreds or even thousands to move any appreciable fraction of a mountain.

"By the same token, although an atomic bomb could be useful in

Stocks Dip To $6 Share

New York, June 26 (AP)—Big blocks of stocks were dumped on the market today in the first response to hostilities in Korea.

Leading issues plunged $1 to around $6 a share.

Opening transactions were long delayed for many important shares—notably steel and automobile stocks—while buyers and sellers bagged over prices.

Initial transactions ranged up to 35,000 shares in the case of Radio Corp., which dropped $1.87 to $20 a share.

The heavy opening sales were the result of selling orders which piled up over the week-end. After this glut of business was disposed of, the market showed a tendency to level off.

Further selling was orderly and further losses minor.

U. S. Steel appeared on the ticker for the first time around 11 o'clock when 15,000 shares traded at $34, off $2. Another half hour or so later Chrysler opened at $77, down $3 a share, in a deal of 18,000 shares.

The pronounced weakness in New York was foreshadowed by a bad slump in the London Exchange.

Most major commodities for future delivery advanced, some the limit allowed for a single day's business.

Middletown showed a population of 22,565, a gain of 721 over 1940. Newburgh had 31,924 as compared to 31,883 in 1940. Port Jervis had 9,348 as compared to 9,749 in 1940.

Suicide Verdict Is Given in Drowning

The body of Alvah Berrian, 74, of Clintonville was recovered from Hard's Pond at Clintonville about 8 p. m. Sunday.

Coroner Ernest A. Kelly said death was due to asphyxiation by drowning. A verdict of death by suicide was issued by the coroner following an investigation by the coroner and state police.

The investigation disclosed that Berrian had been despondent since the death of his wife, Della, in February, 1947, and that he had been ill and had been discharged from St. Francis Hospital the day of his death. Coroner Kelly and state police reported that Berrian had earlier threatened to commit suicide.

Three Animals Perish In Fire Sunday Night

A large barn on the Ira Deyo farm on the Accord-Kyserike road was destroyed by fire Sunday night. The fire was discovered by Deyo at 8:30 p. m. and had gained such headway that it was impossible to enter the structure and remove a bull and two heifers which perished in the flames.

The Accord fire department responded, although unable to save the barn they were able to prevent the fire from communicating to the house which was close by. Paint on the house was blistered but the house was saved.

In addition to the bull and two heifers lost, there was a considerable amount of last year's hay in the barn and some farm machinery and equipment was lost, including the milking equipment. No estimate of the loss was obtainable. Cause of the fire was not determined.

Two persons were injured in two automobile mishaps over the week-end in the city.

Henry Stokley, 45, of the Star Brick Yard, Ulster Landing, suffered a fracture of the right arm and cuts on the face when the sedan he drove struck a pole on East Strand Sunday and Mrs. Isabel Slater, 44, of Avenue E, Brooklyn, suffered an injury of the face in a three-car collision at the Rondout creek bridge Sunday.

Officers George Bowers and Leonard Ellsworth reported at 4:30 a. m. Sunday that Stokley headed east on East Strand near the dock of the Wadsworth Marine Corp., struck an electric line pole and broke it off 20 feet from the ground.

Stokley was taken to Kingston Hospital in a W. N. Conner ambulance and was reported in "fair condition" today. The car was towed from the scene.

Mrs. Slater was riding in a car owned and operated by Charles B. Slater, when it was involved in the collision at the bridge at 5:37 p. m. Saturday.

The others involved were a sedan operated by Michael Wadsworth, of Lawrenceville street, town of Ulster, and an auto owned and operated by Alejandro Diezquez Vazquez, 166 East 97th street, New York. The latter car was towed from the scene.

Friday evening Father Wall visited the home and assisted by the many present, recited the Rosary. The casket was surrounded by beautiful flowers and on the Mass card receiver were dozens of spiritual bouquets, silent symbols of the affection and esteem in which the deceased was held. Thomas, Bartholomew, James and Joseph Loughran, the four sons acted as bearers. Burial was in St. Peter's Cemetery, Rosendale, where the final absolution and blessing were given by Father Wall.

Funeral services for Paul Castello were held Saturday from the home of his parents, 24 Landsey avenue, thence to St. Mary's Church where a Mass of the Angels was offered by the Rev. Edward L. Farrelly, the R. V. Msgr. Martin J. Drury, P. R., V. E., sat in the chancel during the offertory of the Mass. There were many beautiful floral bouquets and spiritual tributes in the form of Mass cards. While the body rested at the home, hundreds of relatives and friends came to express their sympathy to the bereaved family. All children of School 4 called at the home to view the body of their former school mate. Friday night Father John A. Farrelly, called Mass at the Holy Trinity R. C. church in the family plot in St. Mary's Cemetery where the R. V. Msgr. Martin J. Drury pronounced the final blessing assisted by the Rev. John A. Farrelly. Bearers were Charles Landi, Ronald Crispino, Michael Alcega, Robert Post, James Neenan and Jacob Senor, all classmates from School 4.

John J. Roche, one of the best known employees of the New York Central Railroad, died early Sunday morning at Cornwall. Mr. Roche lived in Brooklyn. On Saturday with his wife, the former Emma Tompkins, he was visiting relatives in Cornwall when stricken. He was taken to the Cornwall hospital where he died. He was born in the downtown section of this city where he was well known. He began his railroad employment with the West Shore division in 1912 and was regarded as one of the system's most valuable employees. He was a member of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, No. 10, and was the son of the late George and Ellen Groves Roche, and besides his wife, he is survived by four brothers, Thomas of Newark, N. J.; Christopher, Kingston; George, Brooklyn; and Harold, Forest Hills, L. I.; and three sisters, Mrs. Robert Paulus, Mrs. Elbert Schultz and Mrs. Luke E. Johnson of this city. The funeral will be held Tuesday at 9:30 a. m. from 19 Mountain Road, Cornwall, thence to St. Thomas Church, where a solemn Mass of Requiem will be offered. Burial will be in the Cornwall Cemetery.

Port Ewen Corps Cops First Prize As 'Vols' Parade—Rain drenched and weary Kingston volunteer firemen, auxiliaries, and city officials returned Saturday night from one of Hudson Valley's biggest firemen's parades at Poughkeepsie.

Between 40,000 and 50,000 persons lined the streets, between thunder showers, and watched the estimated 6,000 marchers. Shortly before 5 p. m., spectators and marchers alike scurried for shelter as a hard driving rain fell, but the marchers reformed and continued when the weather cleared about 5:15.

The Port Ewen Drum Corps came away with a first prize as best senior drum corps in the parade, which featured over 60 musical units.

Kingston units to march included the John N. Cordis Hose Company and its auxiliary. They were accompanied by Mayor Oscar V. Newkirk, Fire Chief Joseph L. Murphy, Deputy Chief Harold Sanford, Commissioners Charles Derrenbacher, Henry Kelsch and Frank Burr, and Supervisor William Sinsabaugh.

With city streets blocked off for the parade and hundreds of spectators lining the sidewalks, Poughkeepsie from this side of the river, a major traffic tie-up resulted at the Mid-Hudson Bridge just before parade time, making many of the marching units late at their formation points. It took one automobile 36 minutes to travel the 1.7 mile from the Highland traffic circle to the Poughkeepsie end of the bridge.

Two Killed at Races—Berlin, N. J., June 26 (AP)—A 33-year-old mother and one of her children were killed at Atco Speedway by a speeding stock car racer that crashed through a guard rail yesterday. Another child was injured seriously. Several thousand racing fans saw the car, driven by Don MacFarland of Jorham, Pa., hurtle through the fence on the track's southeast corner. He was not hurt. Killed was Mrs. Mary Suggs, of Camden, and her son, William, six.

Georgia Raises Crickets—Atlanta (AP)—Crickets raising is a booming business in this part of the south. Farmers say they make fine bait. But wild crickets are sometimes as hard to catch as the fish. Those who raise them sell them for bait at a cent and a half a cricket. Breeding stock brings two cents. George Smith, for instance, has turned his backyard chicken house into a cricket raising business. He has 150,000 breeders and possibly a total of 300,000 crickets. He hasn't counted them. They eat laying mash just as his chickens used to do. But the 16 bags a week he used to buy for his chickens would feed his crickets for 10 years.

Financial and Commercial

New York, June 26 (AP)—A second wave of selling broke over the stock market shortly after noon today after prices had tumbled $1 to $5 a share in the morning.

Selling orders hit the floor of the exchange so fast that the high-speed ticker tape could not maintain its rapid report of dealings.

Losses ranged more than $8 a share. Selling was general. Alcoa, however, showed independent strength.

Water Supply Is Good—New York, June 26 (AP)—City officials, who contended with a drought water shortage for many months, reported yesterday that the reservoir storage stood at 24 percent over a year previous.

Storage yesterday was 92.8 percent of capacity, compared with 91.7 percent a year ago. Frank X. Elder, deputy chief water engineer, said there were heavy showers in the watershed area Saturday. The cloud-cooling caused generators to pump up silver sulfide smoke that day in line with the city's artificial rainmaking program.

New York, June 26 (AP)—The Algonquin Cab Company, 419 W. 42nd street, the Bronx, was robbed of about $800 by two men, one of whom may have been named, at 3:45 a. m. (E.S.T.) today. Police said the bandits approached Frank Passero, of 37-24 29th street, Astoria, Queens, night manager of the garage, and forced him to turn over the keys to the office. The men forced him into a wash room, entered the office, took a tin box containing two days' receipts, and fled in a company cab which had been parked outside. Police found the cab abandoned at 145th street and Jackson avenue, a few blocks away.

A Dog's Life

Do you live in fear of a violent death or injury? Probably not unless you are a dog living on or near the 200 block of Elmendorf street, this city. Thursday evening I saw white and tan dog visiting this neighborhood. He seemed friendly; romping with the local dogs and playing with the children. Shortly afterward a police car pulled up to pick up the dog but found themselves incapable of catching it. Finally a small girl went to the dog, petted it, and coaxed it up to the door of the police car. However, the police decided not to take it as the dog was not vicious nor was it bothering anyone.
About 10:15 p. m. a shot rang out arousing the entire neighborhood. Since when are you allowed to discharge a firearm within the city limits and get away with it? At any rate the dog was viciously wounded. There is one thing that should be noted. About three weeks prior to this time one person in this neighborhood threatened to shoot any of the neighbors' dogs that entered his yard. The shot rang out from the very close proximity of his house yet the police refused to do anything about it unless someone would swear that they were an eye witness or place charges against the man. Why is no investigation being made?

Women and children were frightened by the shot. Some children were awakened, screaming from a sound sleep. This mingled with the howling of the wounded dog created quite a bit of excitement. The animal was still alive Friday morning at 6:30 a. m. when he was picked up. How the dog must have suffered throughout the night. S.P.C.A. notice. A shot in the dark at this time of night could prove dangerous to a passing pedestrian or a playing child. What is the city going to do about it?

Service Slash Postponed

New York, June 26 (AP)—A 20 per cent slash in service by the Third Avenue Transit Corporation, scheduled for today in Manhattan and the Bronx, has been postponed for at least 24 hours. The plan brought a strike threat from the C.I.O. Transport Workers Union—to be effective at the time of the cut and resulting lay-off of from 300 to 500 men. A still later reaction was Mayor William O'Dwyer's suggestion that the city buy the Manhattan and Bronx sections of the bankrupt company.

ERICKSON'S GAMBLING PLEA

When Frank Erickson, the 54-year-old New York gambler, pleaded guilty to book-making charges the other day, he may or may not have thought the cards were stacked against him.

But whatever his motive, it's certain he's a hero in the gambling world today. By avoiding a trial, he's kept the public's embarrassing gaze off not only his own affairs but those of many other bookies in a lot of places.

Names, details of technique, clientele, and numerous other trade secrets would have been exposed. Now, thanks to Erickson's "martyrdom," most of this will lie untouched in the district attorney's files.

If anyone has any doubts what withering damage the spotlight does to the careers of men on the left-hand side of the law, he need only note Erickson's behavior in a New York courtroom. Throughout the entire proceedings, the mild-mannered, heavy-jawed gambler was ashen and frightened. He managed to utter just one word, and that with difficulty.

Frank Hogan, the New York district attorney, calls Erickson the "biggest and most notorious bookmaker in the United States." The claim might be hard to prove. But it's clear he's big. He admitted to a congressional committee that he made $100,000 in a recent year. His income from 1933 to 1945 is "generally understood to have been $220,000."

Hogan is confident Erickson has now been forced from the gambling picture for all time. Again, that contention may be debatable. One thing, however, the case definitely does do:

It demonstrates that the top men of today's gambling and crime syndicates can be snared, for all their clever effort to "stay legal" and operate behind a facade of legitimate business. And they can be caught on charges that bear real relation to their questionable activities, rather than through reliance on such incidental violations as federal income tax evasion.

Action against Erickson must be just a starter. Some man or group of men will try to pick up the scepter he has dropped. The gambling business probably will go on pretty much as usual unless the authorities smash his whole set-up and his rivals as well. Without this sequel, Erickson's conviction will serve little purpose.

Putting Erickson behind bars for the first time in his life is a move, too, that should lend much heart to the U. S. senators now probing crime in the capital. Having seen this tangible proof that results are possible, the Senate crime investigating committee should redouble its efforts to unearth the full story of organized criminal operations in America. Once they begin blinking under the glare of news photographers' flash bulbs, the criminals will be on the way out.

FIVE TEXASES
Shall proud Texas be divided into five states? When admitted into the Union, she reserved the right. Now Texas oil men are enraged by the Supreme Court ruling that title to the submerged coastal oil lands belongs to the federal government and not to separate states. The time has come for Texas to resort to her historic right of self-division, says Chairman Ernest O. Thompson of the Texas Railroad Commission. "That would give the Texas country ten senators instead of two, enough perhaps to swing a congressional resolution annulling the Supreme Court decision."

This idea has been proposed many times. It always fails because of two objections which no doubt will prove fatal now. It would deprive Texas of the honor of being by far the largest state. Secondly, all Texas and not a particular county feels itself the possessor of the glories of the Alamo.

The follies and foolishness of feminine fashions are a favorite target of masculine attack. But how many men wear shoes which are the same shape as their feet? The foot is shaped like a blunt wedge pointing to the rear, with a gently rounded front

'These Days'

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

A NEW ORDER OF POLITICIAN

It used to be that politicians were afraid of the people, particularly when an election approached. It is true that in some of the larger cities, the bosses were careless in matters of money honesty; yet they generally developed a delicacy of projecting their personalities, so that the external of decency were sharply outlined, like the frock coats they wore.

Nowadays, Harry Hopkins' general assumption that the people are dopes pervades the political atmosphere. It was discussing such a matter recently with a woman who gives the impression of intelligence and yet who, in spite of Teheran and Yalta and too much else to cite in one article, insists that Franklin D. Roosevelt was a thoughtful man in his relationship to his own people. The record does not count with such a person, because for a highly cultivated civic responsibility has been substituted the much decried Fascist concept of the elite. Historical objectivity is replaced by the great man cult.

In a word, too many Americans for the good of the country worship human beings, the heroes of the era, who, to them, represent the thought that whatever such men do, good or evil, must have a right reason or they would not have done it. Such a concept of the political leader is closer to that held by the Nazi, who accepted Hitler implicitly, than to the American assumption that all men are equal before the law. Yet those who hate Hitler the loudest, follow the Nazi doctrine in relationship to Roosevelt and to his circle. They acknowledge an elite which most Americans have been taught to reject.

Passing over the question of Roosevelt, the attitude is bad in a free country because it exalts an elected or an appointed official beyond our concept of the relationship of the people of their employed and paid servants, the officials.

For instance, such office-holders as Oscar Ewing, Charles F. Brannan, and such a Congressman as Frank Buchanan forget that they are not leaders but servants; that they were not chosen to impose their concepts and will upon the people, but to submit to popular responses. It must be the people who decide. It is their country; they pay the taxes. They vote.

Perhaps the difficulty arose from Mr. Roosevelt's assumption that a college degree and affiliation established a man as an expert. This has never been true anywhere and certainly it has not been true in this country where the widest experience is often the product of the give and take of practical operations. Many of our most fruitful citizens were not college men, but came out of the factory and business.

Thus, under Roosevelt, a vast number of the officials were given not only employment, but rank and power, to the confusion of the nation. Harry Truman has tended to be equally independent on economic questions, a field in which Keynesianism is regarded by many as dubious. The person of practical experience finds himself so completely out of the picture and operations, of these doctrinaire personalities that he either leaves them to their own devices or falls before them without resistance but with much sulking.

Curiously, our new type of official is acting more like a German official than like anything that has been known heretofore in the Anglo-Saxon world. They sense themselves as masters, probably because they have been so long in office. When officials felt that their tenure was tentative, they were restrained by their responsibility to the people. They checked. They had their ear to the ground.

Today the official calculates what device may be made attractive, no matter how false or harmful, and having projected that, he sets out to demand its acceptance. Should Congress reject him, he regards it as a personal attack, although under our constitutional system, the bureaucrat is only hired to carry forward the will of Congress to the letter of the law.

There is a lack of propriety in all this which surely comes from the initial hero-worship of the President and a respect for his office beyond constitutional requirements. When a nation adulterates its so-called moral code, it weakens its apparatus of control over its officials.

NEW DRUGS FOR RHEUMATISM

While patients suffering with rheumatism patiently wait for the arrival of cortisone and ACTH in sufficient quantities to supply their needs, it is interesting to read of a new drug which relieves pain of rheumatism by loosening up the spasm which so often tightens muscles and causes pain. This drug is known in Great Britain as Myanesin and in the United States as Tolserol. Its great value lies in the fact that it causes complete relaxation of nerves and muscles, yet the patient does not become drowsy or unconscious.

In "The Journal of Pharmacology and Experimental Therapeutics," Drs. Elwood Henneman, Arnold Kaplan, and Klaus Unna, University of Illinois College of Medicine, state that it is now possible to estimate a muscle spasm in spasmolytic. They have been able to show that Myanesin can hurry the action of the nerves supplying muscles, causing spasm, and can also slow up the action of these nerves, relieving spasm.

In "Medical Clinics of North America," Dr. Richard T. Smith, Rheumatologist, Jefferson Medical College Hospital, Philadelphia, states that in the majority of rheumatic disorders spasm of muscles is responsible for a considerable degree of disability, disfigurement and loss of use. Spasm may be produced by exposure to excessive heat or cold, overextension of the muscle, sprains or strains, direct injury, overuse of certain muscles not generally used for the work or exercises being taken, and loss of muscle tissue. The spasm may cause mild stiffness or almost total loss of the use of the muscle.

Among the methods used to relieve spasm are prostigmin, eucaine, procaine, passive and active exercises and various types of electrical current. "However, new drugs, such as Myanesin and Tolserol, promise more far-reaching benefit either alone or in conjunction with other methods of treatment."

The great value of Tolserol in the treatment of rheumatic pain caused by spasm is that it relaxes spasm of muscle without causing paralysis. Furthermore, it can easily be seen that a relaxed muscle can be exercised or massaged to a greater extent, thus increasing circulation in the muscle and removing wastes which cause pain and stiffness.

Until cortisone and ACTH are available in good supply, the use of Tolserol or Myanesin is worth a trial.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON

Rapid City, South Dakota.—I came out to the Black Hills yesterday to dedicate the gigantic lighting system which now floods the majestic granite faces of Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln and Theodore Roosevelt, carved high on the side of Mount Rushmore in this beautiful national park.

Sometimes I think it is a good thing for a Washington newspaperman, or even a Washington bureaucrat or for every American as a matter of fact, to get away from his routine and do some thinking about our founding fathers and the great goals they set for us to carry out.

The four patriots whose faces are carved on this mountain side were all crusaders and, in a sense, dangerous revolutionaries. In fact, Washington and Jefferson were considered so dangerous that the crowned heads of Europe tried desperately—even as late as the Emperor Maximilian during our Civil War—to defeat the "subversive" democracy left in their wake.

Lincoln was another revolutionary, considered so dangerous by the South that it rebelled. While Teddy Roosevelt's "dangerous" campaign against big business caused the corporations of his day to heap more abuse on his head than that heaped on the head of another Roosevelt.

Nevertheless, these men set a creed of government and a goal for human living which has surpassed anything in the world today. They tried to take the basic principles of Christianity and apply them to the governing of peoples. Christ left to the world the doctrine of the dignity of man. The founding fathers, building in a new, clean world, tried to carry that doctrine out. The philosophy which Jefferson laid down for the guidance and protection of the individual man in the society of men was carried further by Lincoln's crusade to make all men free and equal.

How well we of this generation have succeeded in living up to their great goals will be for others to judge, but at least I think we have tried.

The Age of Fear

However, in this year 1950, halfway through this modern and amazing century, we are in real danger of bogging down in an "age of fear."

Faced with the awful knowledge that others have the atomic bomb, faced with the fear of the hydrogen bomb, of bacteriological warfare, of new trans-oceanic submarines and trans-Atlantic rockets, we are in definite danger of relapsing into an age of fear, an age when we do not go forward because we are paralyzed with fright.

The symptoms of fear have been all too apparent in recent months—almost ever since President Truman announced that Russia had the atomic bomb. It is a well-known medical fact that fear causes paralysis and lack of decision. When injected into the human body it causes nausea and poison. Injected into the body politic, it hinders the same effect.

Perhaps that is why we have been so busy looking under state department beds and worrying about five-year-old mistakes that we fail to look ahead to prevent the mistakes of the future.

Washington and Jefferson had a lot more excuse to succumb to fear than we. They were operating in a weak and struggling colony, surrounded by big and avaricious monarchies. But they were so busy pioneering, so busy pushing on to new frontiers, that they didn't have time to be afraid.

Yet we, the most powerful nation in the world, are so busy concentrating on armed defense that either we don't have time, or are too paralyzed with fear to take the offensive.

Ideas, Not Bullets

The Communists today are not fighting with bodies or bullets, but with ideas and men's minds. Bodies and bullets, artillery and airplanes are expensive. Ideas are cheap; though it takes ingenuity, perseverance and courage to use them.

We have sent billions in arms, food and material to Europe and the Orient, but we have not accompanied them with ideas. In most cases we have not even stamped them with a mark to let it be known they came from the American people. Sometimes we have stamped them with the initials "U.N.N.R.A." or "J.R.C." but few people know what those initials mean.

Almost never have we spelled out the fact: "These gifts come to you from folks just like you in Wichita, Wenatchee and Waukegan."

One trouble with us—and our allies—is that our arms program leaves no alternative but war. Adequate arms are necessary. But leaving arms on top of more arms, with no other objective or alternative in sight, makes people lose hope. They know this leads to war.

Thus, long before war comes, they are paralyzed with discouragement and fear.

Age of Hope

So perhaps what the world needs today are some new objectives, new goals, and new hope. Perhaps what we need to do is take the great goals of Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln and Roosevelt set for us, and extend them beyond our own borders.

We have done a pretty good job of fulfilling these goals in this country, but we have rested on our oars in extending their creed to others.

Perhaps we need a new formula, a new means of extending the ideals of Washington, Jefferson and Lincoln to the rest of the world, a new vehicle for selling hope.

I am not sure what that vehicle is. But I do know that we must offer ourselves and the rest of the world something more than arms and the inevitable war that comes from sole reliance on arms.

The first world war gave Russia to the Communists. The second war gave Russia half the world. The third world war, if it comes, would leave a chaos in which communism would thrive everywhere.

So let's get away from this age of fear and its sole reliance on armed force. And in subsequent columns I should like to discuss how we can get back to an age of courage, faith and hope.

Acheson's Policy Seen as Activity Against Inflexibly Immoral Groups in Russia
By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, June 26. There is no more loyal American than Dean Acheson, secretary of state, and no more conscientious public servant but, at the same time, no other secretary of state has been as inflexible in pursuing against all logic a single objective—the idea that manifestation of our physical strength can put morals into an immoral group of leaders in Soviet Russia.

For months now the speeches from the Department of State and the Department of Defense have been stressing the growth of American defenses and the North Atlantic defense program, and Mr. Acheson himself again and again has referred to the need to create "moral strength" everywhere in the world. But when one asks where that policy is heading, the only answer is a vague statement about a hoped-for willingness of the Kremlin leaders eventually to change their habits and be good.

Secretary Acheson's speech at Harvard was a penetrating and unambiguous indictment of the misbehavior of the Soviet government in the family of nations. After this review is examined, it is difficult to see how the United States government can ever again put faith or trust in anything the present Soviet rulers may pledge.

Yet Mr. Acheson, oblivious to the obvious danger he has introduced, said: "Harvard."

"Strength is not a substitute for discussion and accommodation. As the leaders of the Soviet Union come to appreciate that their analyses of the world situation and their policies flowing from that analysis have been incorrect, the leaders of the Soviet Union will be able to make sensible adjustments of matters affecting the stability and progress of the international community will increase."

Until the Soviet leaders do genuinely accept a "live and let live" philosophy, then no approach to the world, however imaginative, and no program derived from the Communist movement will help to resolve our mutual problems.

"This does not mean that discussion should not take place, but that every effort should be made to settle any questions which are possible of settlement."

As one reads and rereads carefully these few paragraphs which were the heart of Mr. Acheson's speech, it is evident that Mr. Acheson sets up a premise and then strikes it down. He declares, on the one hand, that the Soviet leaders may conceivably see the error of their way, but he adds that nothing can be done until they accept a "live and let live" policy. This implies that the misbehavior of the Soviet rulers in the last five years could somehow be forgotten by us and complete trust and faith be placed in the Kremlin's word. The American people will never believe that any treaty with the Kremlin will be worth the paper it is written on, not after the perditions recited by the Soviet leaders so painstakingly repeated by Secretary Acheson in his speeches.

What, then, is left? Again Secretary Acheson strikes down the only alternative—the "imaginative approach." He rejects it without allowing it to be tried. One approach around which public opinion could be readily mobilized in this country calls for a separation of the Kremlin from the Russian people and the offering of a comprehensive program of economic and social benefits that could be introduced to the Russian people. There is evidence that this is not getting across the iron barrier every day. The "Voice of America" could be concentrated on such an imaginative program instead of on the ponderous, unchangeable and dull recital of political news that the average Russian craves to hear no more than does the average American.

There are lots of ways in which the "imaginative approach" can lead to the liberation of the Russian people. It can be done without considering for a moment any compromise of the rulers in the Kremlin. For after the record so promptly presented by the secretary of state in his speech last week, they have forfeited their right to any further consideration as a responsible government in world affairs.

AS PEGLER SEES IT

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

New York, June 22. President Truman recently named as Vice President Alben Barkley a gold medal for which Congress appropriated $2,500. Except in the most technical legal sense this appointment was an embezzlement of money by trustees and the medal therefore is a tainted honor. Barkley should return it in conformity with his own speech of acceptance in which he said he could think of no person who Congress should have thought he deserved the medal. He was not overly modest in this. No honest person can pretend to, for such reason exists. His services to the republic have been undistinguished and routine and the total net result of the people who have now been gipped of $2,500 of their liberties, their fortunes and the integrity and safety of their republic.

Barkley has been either actively implicated in the most despicable betrayals of popular trust in elected officials which distinguished the Roosevelt-Truman-Philosophy regime, or a knowing acquiescent stooge. At best he has been at all times an accomplice of the wickedness in their nefarious program of plunder, exploitation and the corruption and debauchery of civil morals and the legitimate political ideals of the republic. The very origin, history and presentation of this legalized booty are a dramatic and horrifying demonstration of the process of rot which began with the use of W.P.A. to corrupt the ballot in Barkley's own state, and continues through the European Recovery Program.

In presenting the trinket to his old reliable accomplice in evil designs against constitutional government and the interests of the citizens, Truman said he entertained some doubt of Barkley's worthiness. He appeared to be facetious, but many a true word is spoken in jest. Truman's remark that he had given away more medals than all the other presidents put together, but took more pleasure in this presentation than he ever had in any other, was a sizzling appraisal of the awards for valor which had been latched onto the wrong man.

The Medal of Honor costs about 60 cents at the present inflated exchange.

Chief Justice Vinson, who seems not to be guilty of active vulgarity in his social activities but not to know any better, appeared in the lineup to honor his old friend. These two scoundrels have labored for many years and Vinson managed Barkley's 1926 campaign. This was not the year that Barkley's victory was tainted by fraud through the manipulation of W.P.A. money. The chief justice of the United States remarked at the old familiar champagne and testimonial dinner that the occasion was "a sweet recognition of a great man's work." That comment is a capricious appraisal of the standards of greatness which prevail now in the Supreme Court.

To a man of Vinson's morals, qualified as they are by the politics he plays and the company he keeps, it would not occur that Barkley's title to this valuable medal was subject to the slightest question. The power of the purse was entrusted to the Congress in the founding days on a stern assumption that they would not impose on their trust to misappropriate public money to gratify their hands. A just or dignified man would not note that this misappropriation of $2,500 of the people's money could accomplish no conceivable public benefit and was a waste, not to say a worse abuse of trust.

Yet it would have been equally honorable and consistent with the morals of the Democrats to vote Barkley a million dollars, cash, exempt from the income tax, as Truman's $50,000 annual bonus is.

The difference between $2,500 thus arbitrarily lifted from a bankrupt national chamber and a million or a billion is only mathematical. It might have occurred to Vinson that the bums who thus latched onto the medal found it quite possible that they had found it quite possible that they had found it themselves by a private subscription of about $1 a head. However, as a veteran member of the lodge himself he also knew the absurdity of expecting these parasites to bear any portion of an expense which they could shove onto the shoulders of the contemptible monstrosity of the Common Man.

While they were at their sentimental chore of giving Truman largess, immune alike from taxes and accounting, they hopped their own graft with a fraudulent allowance of $2,500 a year falsely described as an expense appropriation subject to no check beyond their own smug affirmations that it is spent in the public interest.

Barkley served in or better say, attended Congress for about 35 years. He was paid in full for his time and the score was all even when, to his own amazement, he was elected vice president in 1948. The people of the United States owed him nothing.

The laborious attempts of the banal comrades for many years

Census Office Is Due to Close at Armory on June 30

The U. S. Census office at the state armory on Manor avenue in this city will close Friday, June 30, it was announced today by J. J. Carroll, district supervisor.

The census bureau jobs held by the supervisor and his administrative staff will terminate on that date. Most enumerators have already been discharged.

It is expected that preliminary figures on the population of Kingston and the various subdivisions of Ulster county will be made public next week, Carroll said. The preliminary figures must be checked at the area office in New York before they can be released to the public. Then, the figures are released "subject to future revision." The final, official 1950 census figures will be obtainable after further re-checking and cross-checking at Philadelphia.

No estimation or guess was made today by Carroll as to what the 1950 figures will show for Kingston. Furniture in the local census office was used furniture obtained through war surplus and other government agencies. When this office closes, it will be donated to the state education department in accordance with a recent directive received here. Included are several desks, filing cabinets and other items.

"Missed persons" coupons printed in this and other county newspapers resulted in 141 returns, Carroll said. Of that number, 92 were from the city of Kingston.

On checking these names, it was found that 17 had been enumerated before the forms were received at the district office. The remaining 75 were contacted on call-backs and the persons either enumerated at that time or if they were out, individual census returns were left at their homes and those are now being received at the local office.

In the county outside of Kingston, seven of the 49 persons who sent in coupons had been enumerated. The remaining 42 are being counted on individual census reports.

claque of Washington reporters to endeavor him by calling him the veep and sentimentalizing his serene antics in threes have slightly confused but not altered the facts in this respect.

This $2,500 was wing from the earnings and savings of scores of worried, needy Americans. They may now understand more clearly that they are not the masters but are the subjects of Congress. They cannot challenge this appropriation. Barkley cannot be made to pay it back except by some highly unlikely process of embarrassment and shame.

Barkley said he valued the sentiment more than the gold in the medal. That sentiment could have been as well expressed in lead or tin by any manufacturer of Coney Island souvenirs, and either of these metals would have been more appropriate.

Rites Are Completed

Vatican City, June 26 (AP)—Pope Pius XII completed sainthood rites yesterday for little Maria Goretti, "martyr of purity," who died at the age of 11 resisting a rapist. Wearing a blood-red mantle symbolizing martyrdom, the pontiff celebrated the culminating pontifical Mass before some 60,000 persons, including 11 cardinals and more than 100 bishops. The two-part canonization ceremony began Saturday before an estimated 500,000 persons in St. Peter's Square.

Searcher Is Predicted

New York, June 26 (AP)—More scorching temperatures were predicted for the metropolitan area today, after New York city had its highest official mercury reading of the year yesterday. Highs near 90 degrees were forecast for today. The mercury hit 91.8 degrees at 1:15 p. m. (E.S.T.) yesterday. The previous high this year was 89.7 degrees on June 7.

POWER? Sure! Here's a whole bonnetful of Fireball straight-eight power.

Room? Plenty—in big, sofa-wide seats and generous room for elbows and shoulders.

Style? Well, take a look—see anything on the road today that is so smart, so sleek, so quickly spotted?

But that's just a start in this beauty. Here you're going to meet the "ride of a lifetime"—smooth, level-going comfort in the quite matchless Buick manner.

Just see why this is so:

Most cars have coil springs in front. Buick has them all around.

Most cars now ride on low-pressure tires. Buick adds to them Safety-Ride rims to cut heel-over and sway.

Most cars drive through the rear springs, which means they have to be stiff. Buick drives through a firm torque-tube that takes up driving thrust and roughness.

And no other car—no, not a single one—has all these comfort extras plus husky frames plus Hi-Poised engine mountings plus middle-of-the-car seating plus the extra silkiness of Dynaflo Drive.*

*Standard on Roadmaster, optional at extra cost on Super and Wildcat models.

Optional equipment, state and local taxes, if any, additional. Prices may vary slightly in adjoining communities due to shipping charges. All prices subject to change without notice.

Worth something? You bet it is. But it's riding luxury that doesn't show up in the price tags. Figures start at levels lower than on many sixes—yet every Buick has this matchless array of ride features.

Better come learn about them—by firsthand trial. Can you see your Buick dealer today?

BABSON on BUSINESS

Babson Park, Mass., June 23—Knowing there are a number of American housewives who read this column, perhaps a few money-saving hints on household buying may come in handy at this time of year.

Meat and poultry account for a large part of the food budget of most families. Intelligent purchasing of these important items should result in substantial cash savings during the course of a year. Especially should this be true if your family is the fortunate possessor of a deep freezer unit, since economical quantity buying is not feasible without adequate cold-storage space. I strongly recommend that you invest in a deep freeze unit, if you do not already own one.

This is not the time to stock up on meat or even poultry. Normally, these should be on the bargain counter in the late fall or early winter, say November or December. Marketings of cattle, hogs, and poultry are seasonally heavy at that time; and this bunching of supplies should result in price concessions over retail quantities. The best grades of heavy steer beef, however, usually do not come on the market in quantity until late winter or early spring.

Eggs and Dairy Products
The modern healthy hen can produce a surprising number of eggs during a year. But in March, April, and May she really settles down to business, with an output unequalled in size and quality in any other three-month period. As a result of this pressure of supplies, egg prices usually are at their seasonal low point during the spring. Spring eggs also have excellent storage characteristics. Eggs, however, are now a purchase in many sections where laying has been a little late this year.

Prices of dairy products are rather closely related to the milk flow, which is at its seasonal peak around June. If you have storage facilities, June or July normally is the best time to buy butter, since the market at that time should reflect heavy production. There is a time lag in cheese, however; best buying opportunities appear to be in November, since good cheese must be well cured. Expensive milk is likely to be less expensive in June or July, owing to seasonally heavy output.

Cool and Oils
Seasonal factors also play an important part as price deter-minants of both hard and liquid fuels. In normal times, it is the practice of the anthracite producers to cut prices in April, as an inducement to customers to fill their bins during the summer period of slack consumption. You should take advantage of these summer price cuts when available. You thereby will save money and also help to smooth out the industry's production curve. Heavy stocks and lack of demand often result in August or September price concessions on bituminous coal.

The petroleum industry is so vast and the interplay of price-making factors is so intricate that it is extremely difficult to forecast very far in advance the best buying times for oil products. However, pressure of mounting refiners' stocks, low demand, and intense competition frequently result in price cuts in fuel oil and kerosene during the summer months. Gasoline prices, however, will usually be lowest in December or January, when refiners' stocks are rising seasonally and total consumption is at relatively low levels.

Miscellaneous Suggestions
Here are the seasonally best buying times for a few other items: Try your luck on canned peas in June, canned corn in July, and canned tomatoes in August. Canned salmon usually is cheapest in September. Shop for bargains in dry beans in November and December, and lay in your supply of potatoes in the fall, when prices normally are at seasonal lows. Rice and flour usually are good buys in August or September, laid in December, and citrus fruits in January or early February.

Also do not neglect January "white sales," which usually offer real bargains in soft goods. Keep in mind the February furniture clearance sales of summer goods. Remember, too, that nothing is a bargain if you cannot afford it or if it lacks quality! Just a thought to use when trading for an automobile: Tell the dealer that with one car today for every four people, a decline in auto sales may soon come. The previous year's point came in 1949 when there was one car for about every five of population. My guess is that next January may be a good time to buy an automobile.

'Jet-Propelled' Bird
The frigate bird is said to be the world's fastest bird in horizontal flight, having been clocked at more than 200 miles per hour.

Do You Remember

by SOPHIE MILLER

When warm summer weather arrives folks begin talking about Kingston Point. I was down there one hot afternoon, and the Hudson river breeze is still there for everyone to enjoy although all the buildings are gone. There were some barges up at the dock, and a trim tug-boat came steaming from the Rondout Yacht Club direction. It was around 6 o'clock, and the immaculate cook in a spotless white apron stood on the lower deck ringing his good old dinner bell. I bet there was good food aboard, and it must taste twice as good out on the river.

When the tug came alongside the barges everyone started asking "Where's Steve?" It seems Steve went ashore but just as the tug-boat was in sight he was seen running through the park from the old trolley shelter down over the bridge, but by the time he came to the dock the barges had pulled away so he couldn't get on. The tug-boat was trying to swing around to get near enough to the dock so Steve could make it. A chap, around 40 was the lively skipper, and on seeing me watching the excitement called out "I bet the old Norwiche couldn't do this!" No doubt he is right, for "Callahan No. 1" as this silver colored shiny tug was called, danced around on the water like a ballet dancer. It could go forward, backwards or even sideways under the expert direction of Skipper, William O. Benson, of Sloughsburg. It certainly could do more tricks than any boat I ever saw perform. Finally Steve got aboard, while the cook was throwing some donuts to youngsters who were diving off the dock. I didn't get the cook's name, but the Skipper said he was "a good cook" and came from Port Haven. "Making up a tow" is quick business now-a-days. In no time at all the tug swings around the barges, ties them in proper position and off everybody goes on the river, a matter of 10 to 20 minutes at the most from the time the tug gets there, ready to take off.

Kingston Point Park may not be the old amusement place we remember, but there are always scenes on the river which are new from "making up a tow" to other river views which make it still a worthwhile and cool place to visit on a hot afternoon. Wish there was a stand down there which sold tea, coffee, sandwiches etc., as one gets so hungry by the river. Perhaps somebody might do something about it someday.

Often we see the double-engine diesel trains speeding on the River-cliff side without stopping. Just to show you how "Time Marches On," the following is taken from "The Plebeian" newspaper of December 20, 1914 of Kingston. The new line of Mail Stages, drawn by four horses on the west side of the Hudson River, between New York and Albany promises to be of great public utility. They arrive at this village every day of the week, Monday excepted, and at much earlier hours than the old line did. The proprietors appear to be actuated with a zealous and laudable desire to give general satisfaction. We are much pleased to find that so good a substitute has been provided for steam boats at the present season, when these useful engines of speedy conveyances and communication must essentially be suspended through the obstruction, which is now interposed to the navigation by the ice. I wonder what the folks of 1914 would say about the fast flying trains of today.

SHOPPING IN POLAND—This sidewalk market scene in Lemburg, Poland, is typical of many cities now behind the Iron Curtain. Lemburg, once a fairly prosperous city, was absorbed by Russia during the war. Most Lemburg Poles were evacuated westward to Polish territory and replaced by Russians. Almost all merchandise is sold through Soviet state stores, at high prices, and these open air peasant markets, selling mostly second-hand clothing and household goods are the only markets where supply and demand control prices.

HEAVENLY THINKS

As I've mentioned before, whenever I come down with a case of brain-blank I smash the crystal on a cheap wrist watch and mussy down to see an old watchmaker on West 11th street. While he's tinkering with the timepiece, I gab with him about this and that, and by the time I leave my watch has a new crystal and I generally have the material for a column.

The other afternoon I noticed an unusual looking clock on his repair bench—one with symbols on the dial instead of numerals.

"It's a Bavarian miracle clock," said the watchmaker, "and each symbol stands for a different miracle. For instance, the little fish represents the miracle of the loaves and fishes. 'Do you believe in that sort of thing?' I asked.

"Whether you think so or not," smiled the old man, "miracles happen all the time. For instance, take the fire in Canada a couple of months ago—the one that wiped out almost the entire town but didn't touch the church."

"It could have been air currents," I said.

"Maybe," said the watchmaker, "but how would you explain away the cross in the sky that two thousand Englishmen swore they saw during an air raid in 1947? Or how would you rationalize the white horsemen who are credited with winning two battles in the first World War?"

"Take your time with the watch and details," I said. "Well," said the old gent, "the first time the horsemen appeared was in August, 1914, when the Germans were advancing through a big hole in the allied line at Mons. One night when it looked as if there was no stopping them, the sky suddenly turned yellow and across it—heading straight for the Jerries—rode three white figures mounted on white horses, the center rider waving a gold-tipped sword. The enemy took one look, and that was the end of the advance."

Coincidence — or God?

By FRANK TRIPP

Judge Thomas F. Fennell was one of the grandest men I ever knew; one of the humanest and kindest. He was a Cornell football track and crew star in the late 90s. He died all too soon for the good of this troubled world and the countless little people who were being made happier because he lived. Everybody called him Tommy or Tommy.

One time when he was holding court in New York he called me at my hotel room late at night. "I ran into a friend of yours today," he said. "That is, I did or I got a good hooking — which wouldn't matter much."

This was Tom's story. He was passing along 42nd street, near Grand Central station. His big athletic bulk bumped into a man who was milling among the horde of hurried subway moles en route to the Manhattan pigeonholes that they call home.

The man was dazed by the impact, staggered backward as if to fall. Tom caught him by the shoulders and held him up. He was well dressed and sober but his eyes were wild and bloodshot. "Let me go, I'm all right," he said to Tom; but Tom said that he wasn't and clung to him.

JUDGE FENNEL, tired from a long day on the bench, took the bewildered stranger into the Comodore and induced him to stay for dinner. "That's where you come in," Tommy said to me. "I guess between us we saved a man's life, if his story is true. Do you know him?"

I did know him. That very afternoon he had come to me in distraction and I had pleaded with him. He was a pretty well known newspaper supply salesman, had called on me for years, in days when all was well with him. He had a good job then and earned good money. Everybody liked him; was glad to have him come around.

Then he met a girl, when he was around 35—and she wasn't (Copyright 1950, General Features Corp.)

the right girl, but he worshipped her. The home and family he wanted never came about. She was out too much nights with other men for that.

He began to drown his troubles, first now and then, finally too much. His work slipped. He got to be a pest. The friends who'd welcomed him came to avoid him. His sales contacts dwindled. He lost his job and could not get another.

When he came to me he borrowed two dollars and wanted no more. Tommy told me why. He wanted to repay a loan he'd from a fellow to whom two dollars was a lot. Then he was going to kill himself.

WHEN TOMMY bumped into him he had just decided it should be the river, rather than the subway tracks, he'd first selected. Tommy spent the evening with the man. An evening with Tom Fennell was good for any man, but it meant life and hope to this one. In the man's confession to Tom he told of that afternoon's visit to me and he could answer questions which proved our acquaintance ship. Then Tommy went to work on him in earnest. Tom won. The man reclaimed his wrecked life. I wonder how often of us bump into a stranger as did Tom just say, "I'm sorry," and go on our way. Perhaps a derelict who needs the kindness by which Tommy saved a life and made a man out of a human wreck.

And I wonder if it was just coincidence that in the great, heartless city of New York, this man who never had heard of Tom Fennell, nor Tom of him, went straight from me into the arms of this grand fellow with whom I grew up, back in the country, hundreds of miles from there.

I can't think it was just coincidence. I think God had something to do with it.

our gratitude to the Great Giver expressed."

George J. Silkworth, chairman of the local June Dairy Month committee, stated that this is the 14th consecutive year to celebrate the observance of Dairy Month. June was selected, he said, because it is the time when nature is most bountiful with milk.

New York is the world's greatest port.

How to reduce tooth decay at no cost!

Nearly three years ago the Dental School at Northwestern University launched one of the most extensive and practical experiments in dental history. The results indicated this:

Tooth decay can be reduced 60 to 80 per cent by the simple process of brushing or rinsing the teeth right after eating.

So says Charles W. Freeman, D.D.S., Dean of N.U.'s dental school, in July Reader's Digest (now on sale).

June Observed As Dairy Month

Mayor Oscar V. Newkirk recently called upon the citizens of Kingston to observe June as Dairy Month in appreciation of the health-giving and financial well-being qualities which dairy products bring to the community. By official proclamation, the mayor declared the period of June as "June Dairy Month for the City of Kingston."

Noting the vital importance to health and well-being derived from milk and milk products, Mayor Newkirk also pointed out that about 15 per cent of all families in the city depend upon the dairy industry for livelihood.

"In full appreciation of the opportunities presented for constructive public service, even in the name of humanity itself, do I urge civic business associations to cooperate in the observance of 'Dairy Month,' the mayor said.

He said that June will serve as a tribute to the vast dairy industry and called for a demonstration of appreciation of milk and dairy products "to the end that our health may be improved, our financial well-being increased, and

George J. Silkworth, chairman of the local June Dairy Month committee, stated that this is the 14th consecutive year to celebrate the observance of Dairy Month. June was selected, he said, because it is the time when nature is most bountiful with milk.

Famous Swedish Author Visits Ulster Before Dog-Sled Expedition Northward

Albert Viksten, one of Sweden's most prolific authors, is a current visitor at the home of Thord Fredenholm in Shokan. The name Viksten is familiar to most Swedish-Americans, many of his nature stories having been adapted as textbooks in Swedish grade schools.

He gathered most of the material for his 50-odd novels from personal experiences—as a lumberjack, mountain climber and fur hunter in the Arctic. Viksten was never one to announce himself. To get an authentic story of seal and bear hunting, for example, he signed as a common seaman on a Norwegian schooner, and endured the rigors of an eight-month cruise in Arctic waters without any special favors asked or given.

His current visit to America culminates an interesting series of events. Some years ago a prospector from the Yukon, Sven Carlson, made his first visit to his home in Sweden since he emigrated, twenty-seven years before. He had special greetings to Viksten from the latter's brother, resident in Vancouver. Viksten became interested in the sound and saw to it that Carlson's experiences for a Stockholm magazine. Carlson suggested that Viksten come to Alaska and obtain more material first hand. Viksten agreed.

There were many difficulties to be overcome, particularly the matter of a visa. The projected tour was to take Viksten through areas of great strategic importance to the United States. When clearance was finally given, Viksten found he had an expedition. A motion picture camera man and an artist were to accompany him and Carlson, and they had a special commission from the Swedish Forestry Service to gather samples of Arctic flora. In addition, Viksten had a contract with one of Sweden's largest publishing houses for one article a week during the entire 10-month trip.

The expedition starts from Vancouver in the beginning of August. The first lap is to take them by auto through the gold mining and Caribou country to Dawson, where temporary headquarters are to be established. Early in October the journey continues northward by dog sled. The sleds employed will be of a type constructed and patented by Sven Carlson and recently officially adopted by the Swedish army. Hunting for bear and wolf will then begin in earnest. From the second headquarters at Moose Creek, where Carlson has several log cabins, the group will engage in trapping, hunting elk and caribou and, of course, the ever sought-after wolf.

An exciting highlight will be a journey by raft down the Yukon River to Tanana, and thence by river boat to Fairbanks. From this latter point several air trips will take them to Point Barrow, Wales Point, Nome and other sections of interest.

Viksten's visit to Shokan is for the purpose of editing English translations of several of his novels, done by Thord Fredenholm, director of the firm "Translations and Publicity," Marston Hill, Mullis, Sweden. The two will visit New York to contact several publishers.

Viksten has nothing but praise for the Catskill scenery. "In many respects," he says, "it is one of the most beautiful areas I've seen."

Georgia Nekos and Lester Elmendorf, Jr., United in Marriage by Two Ceremonies

Two wedding ceremonies, one Greek Orthodox and one Methodist, united in marriage Miss Georgia Nekos, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Nekos, of 321 Washington avenue, and Lester Elmendorf, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Lester C. Elmendorf, 173 Ten Broeck avenue, on June 18 at the Holy Cross Church. Officiating each in the ceremonies of his religion were Bishop Timothy Nomvaks of Poughkeepsie and Dr. Ralph M. Houston of the St. James Methodist Church. Walter Kidd was organist and Winifred Entenit sang traditional wedding selections. The church was decorated with palms and white gladioli.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white lace gown in basque styling with a white satin basque redingote and a long scalloped train. Her Chantilly lace veil fell from a crown tiara in mantilla fashion. She carried white sweet peas and stephanotis on a white satin and lace fan.

Maid of honor was Bessie Nekos, 321 Washington avenue sister of the bride, who wore a gown of aqua net in long basque styling with double scarves draped over the shoulders and falling at either side. Her cartwheel headpiece was of aqua malle trimmed with a full blown rose matching the American Beauty roses she carried in an aqua satin and lace parasol.

Ushers were Louis A. and Nicholas A. Nekos, brothers of the bride, and Gus P. Cunaveles, cousin of the bride.

After a garden reception for members of the immediate families and friends at the Governor Clinton Hotel, the couple left for a tour through the south. For traveling the bride wore a turquoise linen semi-chaste suit with navy velvet hat and accessories, and a corsage of yellow iris. They will live in Kingston.

The bride attended Kingston High School and Mildred Elley Secretarial School in Albany. The groom attended Kingston High School and Champlain College where he was a member of Iota Tau Kappa. A former secretary to Mayor Oscar V. Newkirk, he served in the navy three years. At college he was a member of the "Drones," a select group from the college glee club, and served in the student council, as chairman of the charter committee and as resident counselor.

The Ulster County Historical Society will hold a luncheon at the Governor Clinton Hotel Friday, at 12:30 p. m. Notices have been sent to all members, but the society would welcome any persons interested in its activities, if they will notify the secretary, Guy McCormick of Stone Ridge.

Mrs. Patrick Lowell Putnam from the Belgian Congo will speak on her life in Africa, especially among her neighbors, the Pygmies.

Total of 348 Seniors Will Win Diplomas At K.H.S.; Baccalaureate Sermon Is Given

True success and enduring happiness is obtainable only by striving along the upward path to Heaven, the Rev. Edward I. Farrelly of St. Mary's Church told members of Kingston High School's graduating class in a baccalaureate sermon on Sunday.

Meanwhile, it was announced at the high school that 348 seniors had passed their examinations and would receive diplomas.

The baccalaureate exercises began the series of end-of-the-term activities for the high school. Commencement will be Tuesday night, Class Night will be held tonight, and there will be a graduation dance Wednesday.

After the members of the graduating class marched into the auditorium, the Rev. William J. McVey gave the invocation. Other participants were the Rev. Burton F. Tarr and Rabbi Philip H. Weinberg. The high school choir sang several hymns, and Alice Millonig played organ selections.

In his sermon, Father Farrelly likened life to a pathway strewn with a number of ever-increasing peaks. High school graduation he compared to a foothill of a beautiful mountain range. From the highest peak, God calls us to "come and dwell with Him," the priest said, adding that once we have seen the warmth and beauty of that dwelling place, "you will be satisfied with no other."

Must Follow Commandments

To reach the dwelling place, one must follow God's directions—the Ten Commandments, he said.

Father Farrelly warned against quitting in the middle of the journey, even though on some of the lesser summits are comfort, security, prestige and wealth. True success is not measured in dollars and cents, nor by "two cars in the garage," he said.

Father Farrelly spoke, in part, as follows:

"You have climbed a peak, you have reached a summit. And in the clear, exhilarating air of this high place, you will bask awhile drawing in refreshment and renewing vigor spent in the effort of the climb."

"The next peak you have just climbed which seemed so high to you in the valley of those Freshman days, is in reality just a foothill of a beautiful range of mountains rising to the west."

"In the very fatness of that mountain dwells our Maker, and the aura of His love for us is the golden haze which makes it so attractive. From that height God calls to us. His most beloved creature, to come and dwell with Him. Look well and remember—for once you have seen, even from afar, the warmth and beauty of that dwelling place, you will be satisfied with no other."

Must Chart Course

"Do not in your eagerness plunge into the valley to climb any new peak. Take your bearings, chart your course. There is one summit near at hand that will lead you on to the next and the next. Follow this course, then, when the red rays of the setting sun announce your day."

Major League Roundup

Associated Press Sports Writer
Quick now, baseball fans, what is a bunt?

Silly question? Not at all. In this era of the lively ball the bunt, along with the stolen base, hit-and-run and squeeze play, is becoming as extinct as the dodo bird.

Why lay down a sacrifice bunt when king homer sits on the throne and every pitched ball has a four-base label on it?

Never have the poor pitchers been pounded so unmercifully as in the past four days. Since Thursday, unsympathetic matters have slammed them for 11 homers including 31 yesterday.

Five players hit a pair of homers yesterday. They were Ralph Kiner, Pittsburgh; Hank Sauer, Chicago Cubs; Larry Doby and Ray Boone, Cleveland; and Eddie Joost, Philadelphia Athletics.

Evers Beats Yanks
It was a three-run homer by Hot Evers in the last of the eighth that gave the Tigers a 6-3 second game victory and a split of their double-header with the Yankees. Homers by Joe DiMaggio and Hank Bauer helped Eddie Lopat and the Yankees win the opener against Hal Newhouser, 8-2.

The split left the American League leading Tigers still three games in front of the runner-up Yankees.

The climbing Cleveland Indians were stopped by Washington, 5-3, after winning the opener of a double-header, 7-6, for their fifth straight. Four homers, capped by Al Rosen's grand slammer in the eighth, won the first game for Early Wynn.

Boxer Sweep Pair
The Red Sox swept a pair from St. Louis, 11-5 and 8-2, to give them four straight over the Browns—all under the management of Steve O'Neill. Walter Masterson pitched his first complete game for the winners.

Philadelphia's Athletics defeated the Chicago White Sox, 13-1, in the second game of a double header. The Sox won the opener, 7-6. Philadelphia's Phils rose within a half game of the National League leading Dodgers by dividing a twin bill with Chicago while the Pirates were thrashing Brooklyn, 16-11. The Phils won the second game, 2-1, after the Cubs had won the opener, 11-8.

Vern Bickford, Boston right-hander, blanked the St. Louis Cardinals, 4-0, and the Cincinnati Reds swept a twin bill from the Braves, 6-3 and 6-4.

Reds Ashburn's single with the bases loaded and two out in the bottom of the ninth enabled Philadelphia's Robin Roberts to earn a pitching duel from Bob Rush for his ninth triumph.

Ellen Blackwell gained his fifth triumph for the Reds in the first game while Frank Smith won his first game of the season in the nightcap against the Giants.

Good Judgment Can Locate Hidden Ace

By OSWALD JACOBY

Written for NEA Service

"Please settle a question for us," writes a Minneapolis correspondent. "There is no question about how South should have played the hand to make his contract. The only question is whether South was the victim of bad luck or his own bad judgment."

West opened the jack of hearts, dummy finessed the queen, and East won with the king. East returned a club, and South won with the ace. South next led a trump, and East took the ace. East then returned the deuce of diamonds.

"At this point, South had to make the right play in diamonds in order to make his contract. He could afford to lose one, but only one diamond."

"After much deliberation, South put up the king of diamonds. He thought that West was more likely to be leading from the ace of diamonds than from the queen. His second point was that if he had only an even chance to guess right on this play, the play of the king (if successful) would give him an extra trick.

"When South's king of diamonds lost to the ace, a diamond return set the contract at once. South claims he had been confronted with an out-and-out guess. North claims that if South were a real bridge player he would have known who held the ace of diamonds. This was an easy statement for North to make, since he had been the dummy and had had the chance to look at the hands of the opponents."

"Should South, without being able to look at the hands of the opponents, have known which opponent held the ace of diamonds?"

Yes, South should have known which opponent held the ace of diamonds without peeking at anybody's hand.

East had already shown up with the king of hearts and the ace of spades. If East also held the ace of diamonds, he surely would have taken some action over North's opening bid of one club. He might have been able to bid one diamond, or he might have doubled. However, he would not have passed.

Since South knew that East had actually passed, he should have realized that East almost surely did not hold the ace of diamonds. With the ace of diamonds thus located in the West hand, South's only chance was to play low on the diamond lead by East.

There was one other indication to add to this deduction from the bidding. After winning the first trick, East did not return a diamond but led a club instead. The club was not an attractive lead and East would not have led the club if he had held anything better to lead. If East had held the ace of diamonds, for example, a diamond return would have seemed much more attractive to him than a club return. East's failure to return a diamond at the second trick was therefore an indication that he did not hold the ace of diamonds.

Ellender Claims Votes for Measure

Washington, June 26 (AP)—Senator Ellender (D-La.) claimed enough votes today to complete Congressional action on a $2,000,000 increase in government farm price support funds.

As the Senate prepared to vote on the farm bill at 3 p. m. (E.S.T.), the measure determined opposition aimed at the price supports but at an amendment intended to halt or reduce farm imports from Canada, Mexico and other nations. Leading this opposition were Senators Magnusson (D-Wash.) and Morse (R-Ore.). They have objected to spending government funds to keep prices high for farmers, while allowing potatoes, fruits, grains, beef cattle and other competitive imports to add to domestic price and surplus problems.

Magnusson and Morse want to send the price support legislation back to a Senate-House conference committee with orders to tighten up language intended to restrict imports of farm products.

Their argument collides with the administration's tariff-cutting program under the reciprocal trade agreements act.

Senators Ellender, Holland (D-La.) and other supporters of price support programs were pressing the Senate to accept the compromise already approved by the House.

"I think we will have ample votes to put this through unless there are a lot of absentee senators today," Ellender told a reporter. "If senators will just study this compromise they will see it gives much more protection against farm imports than present law."

Bridge Is Resurfaced
Traffic on the Rondout Creek bridge was held up for an hour this morning between 8:45 and 9:45 o'clock while the bridge pavement was resurfaced. Heavy trucks were held up during the operation and passenger cars were detoured around through Edenville. The job of resurfacing the bridge pavement was done under the jurisdiction of the New York State Department of Public Works under the supervision of Harry G. Kron, resident engineer.

WOODSTOCK NEWS

By RICHARD E. THIBAUT, JR.

Ties Result Sunday At Horse Show for Two Top Trophies

Woodstock, June 26—The fourth annual spring horse show sponsored by the Woodstock Riding Club, Inc., Sunday was one of the most colorful and eventful ever presented in Woodstock. Blue skies overhead and the rain of the day before, checking the dust, provided ideal conditions for the event which was attended by over 500 spectators in a gay holiday mood.

Having achieved its full stature in national importance as a recognized horse show in that it was the initial one as a licensed member in the American Horse Show Association, the occasion was marked by a growing excitement from early morning until the final judging when both the grand championship and reserve to grand championship resulted in a tie. Voting for the Grand Championship trophy with 18 points each were Captain Courier of the Perrott Stable, Newburgh and Barnacle Bill of Southlands Farm, Rhinebeck, the coveted prize being a portrait in color of the winning horse's head painted and donated by Ned Chase, Longstaff, also of Southlands Farm and Ginger Snap owned by Nancy Lawler, totaled 16 points each for the reserve to grand championship ribbons. It was announced that duplicate awards would be given to the winners.

Gets Challenge Trophy
Miss Elaine Van Vleet of Kingston received the Woodstock Riding Club Challenge Trophy, a silver tray, presented for the club by Trooper Ray Dunn. Mrs. George M. Hard co-chairman observed that it wouldn't be a Woodstock Riding Club show without Trooper Dunn, who has attended every show presented in Woodstock.

Winning the jumper championship award after repeated cheers for his performance, Barnacle Bill is now the holder of the prized cup of Bermuda cedar donated by Mrs. J. C. Lighthorn, of Stamford, Conn. Bermuda, Longstaff won the jumper reserve championship ribbons.

Early in the afternoon an added thrill was provided by the arrival at the Ohayo Mt. ring, of Theodore J. Buell, from Hartford, Conn., executive secretary of the American Horse Show Association. Buell gave a brief speech welcoming the Woodstock Riding Club as a new member of the Association. Under the regulations of the organization, he stated, this means it is a standard show and conforms to rules for every class. It protects the show and the entries against unsavory practices and helps those on the level to have a happier day, he concluded.

The judges who served with notable discernment and with whom the spectators were obviously in complete accord were John A. Beach, formerly of California and now of Greenwich, Conn., western jumper equitation, stock seat and palomino classes; Frank Carroll, of Port Chester, and Roger A. Young of White Plains, all recognized by the American Horse Show Association.

23 Classes Represented
In the 23 classes represented, awards of trophies and ribbons were given to the following:

Class 22—Woodstock Riding Club class: (western) one trophy donated by Mrs. Harold Van Vleet, Kingston, 1st, Dusty owned by Alfred Ostrander; 2nd, Amber owned by F. A. Gildersleeve, Kingston; 3rd, Cocoa, owned by
